The 7th Annual Private Schools Summer Conference

Reaching All Students: Gifted, Struggling, and Students with Special Needs

This conference will provide participants hands-on exposure to high-impact, adaptable, functional, and useful evidence-based effective instructional techniques. Participants will be introduced to the foundational components of the Universal Design for Learning (UDL) framework, a planning and delivery framework that seeks to improve learning for all students by increasing meaningful access and reducing barriers to students' diverse learning needs. Throughout the two days of the conference participants will have the opportunity to design and evaluate instructional plans using the UDL framework, and explicit examples of the strategies in use, tips for teaching when using each strategy, and information about applying the strategies with today's learners at all levels will be provided. Additionally, provided content and activities will lay the groundwork for implementation and sustainability of differentiated instruction through opportunities to use a structured collaborative process to evaluate data to inform future instructional decisions.
